

*An intimate look at Bruce Cockburn,
his life and his music*

Pacing The Cage is a documentary that features Canadian singer/songwriter/activist Bruce Cockburn reflecting on his life and career. The documentary features appearances by songwriters Jackson Browne, Sylvia Tyson, Bono, Sarah Harmer, Colin Linden, best-selling authors Michael Ondaatje, William Young, Lt. Gen Romeo Dallaire and Bernie Finkelstein.

Pacing The Cage follows Bruce as he performs sold-out shows, records his live Slice O' Life album, and participates in a series of benefit concerts, featuring never-before-seen live performances of songs from his distinguished catalogue of music.

The documentary sheds new light on Bruce's spirituality and his thoughts on activism, politics, writing and his amazing 40-plus years in the music industry. Closing in present day, we peek into rehearsals for the recent Luminato tribute as Bruce is interviewed at his home, reflecting on his life, career and where he sees himself going in the future.

Pacing The Cage gives viewers new insight into Bruce's life on the road as a performer, master guitar player, activist and songwriter.

THE FEATURE DOCUMENTARY

"The documentary is also about Cockburn as mystic, romantic troubadour, excellent guitar player, prophet and political activist. Michael Ondaatje praises his poetry; fellow songwriter Sylvia Tyson opines that he's done all that while preserving his soul."

NATIONAL POST

"Cockburn is considered one of the best guitarists on the planet, and you can see why. Intricate fingerings, complex, jazzy riffs, unique chord structures, all delivered while singing the powerful songs from his superb catalogue ... Canadian music fans won't want to miss it."
